

We could not implement and finish up our web application, but if we were to finish up, we were planning/trying to implement firebase to store a database on our react web app. JSON schema would have probably looked something like where each user would have specific user ID from spotify and would possibly connect and return to Reddit subreddit api with the information/data we have based on the user's preference of music/genre.

None of us had taken any database courses or had any experience using and so we had a lot of trouble figuring out and implementing and could not finish the project. :(

Used creatly.com to create a sequence diagram.